

IJPS: International Journal of Peace Studies
Copyright Agreement

The International Journal of Peace Studies has the following Copyright Policy:

In submitting an article for publication to the IJPS, the author must warrant that the materials to be published are not plagiarized and that any permission necessary to republish previously copyright protected material has been obtained. Authors must also agree that the IJPS may publish its journal and articles both through print and electronic media or in any other form, whether electronic or optical, or otherwise, that exists now or may exist in the future, and that the IJPS may assign its copyright rights to other entities to publish or distribute IJPS's publication through print or electronic media, including but not limited to, CD-ROMs or electronic databases.

The IJPS holds copyrights to all the material which it publishes. Although an author may provide consent to her/his article to be published in another venue, in accordance with the general convention, we adopt a policy that the permission ought ultimately to be provided by the journal.

Any request or queries can be made through journal.peacestudies@gmail.com and kdegraft@masonlive.gmu.edu.
